

Title of Article + Proper MLA Citation for Works Cited page	Author(s). "Title of Article." Title of Journal, Volume, Issue, Year, pages. Reflective writing and the Revision Process: What were you thinking? By Sandra L. Giles
Summarize the article -- include your reaction, thoughts, anything to help you remember its claims. 100 to 150 words	This article explains to students what reflective writing is and how they apply it to their own writing. It mentions that students may be asked to write about any piece or form of information, but that they use their own thinking to write and reflect on it. The author also explains that this way of processing thoughts can help them gain critical distance. The article also gives examples on how students do reflective writing and how they function in the learning process.
Define new terms and concepts by quoting or paraphrasing the original author.	Reflection” and “reflective writing” are umbrella terms that refer to any activity that asks you to think about your own thinking”.
How does this reading connect to other articles from class and/or your own research?	This reading connects to other articles because it is explaining the importance and meaning of reflective writing. We see this all the time as students already when we write. We have to think constantly when we are writing and have to think about our own thoughts so that we can apply that to our writing.
Based on the reading, craft one question to act as a springboard for class discussion.	How can reflective writing benefit us in other ways? Other ways that we may not know of?