

Reading Journal

Copy + Paste this template into a different document (do not try to type directly on it). Then fill it out and post to your blog.

|   |  |
|---|--|
| Title of Article + Proper MLA Citation for Works Cited page  | Giles ""Reflective Writing and the Revision Process." The Library of Congress, Writing spaces 2010, 191-204.   |
| Summarize the article -- include your reaction, thoughts, anything to help you remember its claims. 100 to 150 words | This journal is about how reflective writing has helped the author and how it can benefit your writing. The writer tells a story of her trying to please her teacher by writing a piece that she didn't enjoy writing because her attempting to impress her teacher actually made the readers misunderstand her purpose of the essay. Originally her purpose was to write about snarky kids interrupting a medium but the way she wrote it made it seem that her intent was to document this spirituality. Causing her peer reviewers to guide her in that direction which wasn't her goal. She now shows how a reflection letter can make it easier to understand where the flaws are in your essay. I think this will be very effective in the Major project about Discourse Community. |
| Define new terms and concepts by quoting or paraphrasing the original author.                        | Intention-"a sense of audience and purpose and of what the writer wants the essay to do"(198)  |

|  |   |
|--|---|
| How does this reading connect to other articles from class and/or your own research?   | Dan melzer "Understanding Discourse Community" |
| Based on the reading, craft one question to act as a springboard for class discussion. |   |